

Bruce Catton Says:

Farmers Team With CIO In New York Milk Strike

Continuing his American tour, Catton brings the inside story of the New York milk strike.

UTICA, N. Y.—The significant thing about the recently-ended milk strike was neither the violence that accompanied it nor the success which the embattled farmers won.

Those were the things that made the headlines; but the really important development was a little farther under the surface—the fact that this strike saw the American farmer working hand in hand with the C. I. O.

For a long time, leaders of the C. I. O. have realized that one of the biggest obstacles in their path was the almost universal fear and distrust which the average farmer had for their organization.

It has been a reflection of this notion, as much as anything, which was responsible for the C. I. O.'s deverses in this last session of congress, and nothing has seemed much more important to the C. I. O. high command than the effort to find some way, somewhere, somehow, to make some sort of tie-up with a bona fide farm group.

That finally happened in the New York milk strike.

Part of that was due to Archie Wright, leader of the Dairy Farmer's Union. Born on a farm and now a farmer himself, Wright roved far and wide in his younger days, and for a long time carried a card in the Maritime Union. He was one farm leader who did not need to be "sold" in the C. I. O.

T. W. U. "Loans" Strike Expert

Another factor was the appearance on the scene of capable William Gandall, hard-bitten representative of the Transport Worker's Union in New York City who was loaned to the Farmers' Union by the state C. I. O. authorities.

Gandall, as it happens, got acquainted with the farmers some time before the strike, when he came upstate to try to rally sentiment against a bill pending at Albany which would have hampered the Transport Union.

He got a good reception from the Farmers' Union, and after that particular bit of business was settled he made several more trips to this region, speaking before a number of farm meetings.

During the strike Gandall acted as Wright's officer. Unquestionably a good part of the success of the strike

Johnson Winner For Mississippi

Gets Democratic Nomination For Governor Over Mike Conner

JACKSON, Miss.—(AP)—Assured of the governorship at last, after years of unsuccessful campaigning, Paul B. Johnson, 59, watched his Democratic primary majority pass the 26,000 mark Wednesday to break a Mississippi record.

The governor-to-be achieved his goal after two failures with a majority over Martin Sennett (Mike) Conner that promised to rest at approximately 26,500 votes, well above his plurality in the seven-man race in the first primary.

With only 27 small precincts missing of 1,660, the unofficial vote Wednesday night was:

Johnson 158,982
Conner 132,617

The final official vote was not expected to change these figures more than a fraction.

Mississippi's other nominees, who will be elected in November at the general election are:

Walker Wood, re-elected secretary of state.

James M. Causey, elected state auditor.

Guy McCullen, re-elected land commissioner.

The two district officials named in yesterday's primary were:

T. J. Lowry, state highway commissioner, Northern district.

C. M. Morgan, public service commissioner, Southern district.

The remainder of Mississippi's 1940-44 state and district officials won their races in the first primary on August 8.

Budget Paint Plan Is Announced Here

No Down-Payment Is Required By South Arkansas Implement Co.

A budget plan for painting the home, requiring no down-payment, and with monthly payments as low as $5.75, is announced by South Arkansas Implement company.

The Hope concern is featuring Pee Gee house paint, two coats of which, it is claimed, are equal to three coats of average paint.

Cheap paint blisters and cracks, requiring a house to be painted at an early date, but Pee Gee Mastic House Paint consists of two entirely different coats, according to South Arkansas Implement company.

It is an undercoat to seal the wood or old paint surface. The second is the topcoat, designed to give a brilliant finish and resist action of the sun.

ITALIANS PREPARE

Divide Army Into Two Commands—The Poles Claim Border Crossed

LONDON—(AP)—All telegraphic and telephonic communications between London and the European continent were interrupted Thursday night.

At the same time many normal lines of communications between London and the United States were halted.

The London office of the Associated Press was informed at 12:09 p.m. (Hope time) that British censorship would begin within a few minutes to cut in on the wires carrying its dispatches.

What was happening to communications between various European countries was not known immediately (at least one channel, between Paris and New York, was open).

Foreign observers saw no reason for this unusual division of forces unless it was in obedience to some war plan known only to the high command.

Border Is Crossed

WARSAW, Poland—(AP)—Polish soldiers asserted Thursday night German patrols crossed the border into Polish territory at several points.

They also asserted a German bomber flew over Polish Silesia and had been pursued by Polish planes.

Reports from Danzig said all communications between the Free City and the Polish port of Gdynia had been cut.

A RUSSIAN TRUMP?

Hitler May Resort To Pressure By Russia Against Poland

BERLIN, Germany.—(AP)—Authorized Germans said Thursday night a "pause" had come about in the crisis over negotiations with Great Britain but the negotiations "are not broken off."

Announcement of the full mobilization of the British fleet, coming on top of Poland's extension of mobilization Wednesday, these persons indicated, were at least partly responsible for the "pause."

As a result, it was uncertain whether the British questions, put to Hitler by the British government in a memorandum handed the fuhrer Wednesday night, would be answered.

Hitler was reported ready to play his Russian trump card in an effort to convince the Poles they should come to Berlin and negotiate.

The Russian councillor of the embassy called at the foreign office while hints spread that unless Poland bows to the pressure being put upon her Hitler intends to announce some degree of military co-operation with the Soviets.

We Are All In This Thing Together

The tax problem is certain to be one of the most important to come before the next Congress in January. Therefore it is a good sign to see that efforts are already on foot to put as much common sense as possible behind the tax revision that is certain next year.

Acting Secretary of the Treasury Hanes has sent a letter to many prominent business men and organizations asking their help in a complete study of the tax situation. "This is our common problem," Hanes wrote, "and a successful effort toward its solution will depend largely on our mutual and sympathetic understanding of the questions that confront both the government and the taxpayer."

Now that is a very fine spirit in which to approach the problem of taxation.

After all, we are all in this thing together. The big manufacturer worried about things like the undistributed profits tax just repeated, the small business man burdened with excessive bookkeeping and plaguey small tax worries, the employed man goaded by a host of small and largely hidden sales taxes, and the unemployed man keeping himself afloat on relief or work projects—they are all in a very real sense in the same boat.

The miseries of all of them are due to the single cause of the breakdown of the economic machine. Each is carrying and must carry his peculiar burden, for none can recover until all recover together. It recalls Franklin, who urged his fellow-rebels to unity during revolutionary days by saying "If we don't all hang together, we shall assuredly all hang separately."

The tax burden is not going to be appreciably lower in any near-term future. The national debt, the state and municipal debts, are facts and not theories. They must be paid. They must be paid from taxes.

But not all taxes, even though equal in amount, are equally burdensome on individual taxpayers, and not all have an equal effect on the economic process. There is room for the application to taxation of a great deal more study. It is perfectly possible for a certain tax to yield a great deal of money and yet to have such other social and business effects, as to cost the treasury the loss of other revenues and cancel most of its own effect. This would seem to have been the effect of the undistributed profits tax. It was repealed, not because corporations affected did not like it, but because the effects on the economy as a whole were not in practice good.

Sincere collaboration aimed at making our tax system an intelligent whole rather than a patchwork of compromises between elements out to "get" each other, can be of the greatest service to the country. We hope Acting Secretary Hanes gets the collaboration he asks, and that he makes the best possible use of it.

THE FAMILY DOCTOR

T. M. REG. U. S. PAT. OFF

By DR. MORRIS FISHBURN
Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygeia, the Health Magazine

Rapid Heart Beat, Muscle Pains May Be Due To Anxiety States

Physicians in California have recently remarked that one-third of the practice of most physicians nowadays consists of patients who have what are called anxiety states. These are patients whose symptoms are chiefly the result of what are called anxious reactions.

Any situation or group of circumstances, whether real or fanciful, which threaten the emotional or social life of the individual concerned, may lead to such reactions. Ordinary anxiety is the result of a recognized cause. Examples are fear of harm in a motor accident, or dread of being shot while bullets are flying. The anxiety state is likely to be related to some condition which the patient himself does not recognize. For instance, the example cited is that of a man who felt that because of illness he was unable to work and could not support the girl that he wanted to marry. The real cause of his symptoms was a hidden desire to avoid the marriage.

These anxiety states may reflect themselves in the body physically by a wide variety of symptoms, including a rapid heart rate, a rise in the blood pressure, an inability to swallow, pains in the abdomen, due to contractions of the lower outlet of the stomach, and an excessive breathing rate.

The patient develops hysterical symptoms so that sometimes he will not see because he is convinced in his own mind that he cannot see, or he will not hear because his subconscious mind tells him that he cannot hear.

The doctor should find out all of the circumstances surrounding the patient's life and then determine the extent to which these subconscious thoughts are concerned in the physical state. If the doctor merely explains in simple non-technical language the nature of the condition, realization by the patient may help to bring it under control.

Mere relief of the physical symptoms will not control the condition, because of the underlying mental state. It is for that reason that many of these patients go from one doctor to another seeking relief. In many instances the patient is dissatisfied with the explanation that is clear and is seeking something outside the realm of fact as an excuse for his unfulfilled desires or his unrecognized fears.

It is necessary for the doctor to use suitable remedies to control spasms of the muscular tissue at the opening or closing ends of the stomach and to remedy a too rapid heart rate or a similar physical condition in order to protect the health of the patient during the period while attack on the cause is being made.

It is not well to hazard a guess that a rapid heart rate is based on a mental causation alone. It is necessary to rule out absolutely any physical causes that may exist. This the doctor may do by making a complete study of the heart and sometimes even by using the electrocardiograph to trace the action of its mechanism.

 People change, and few there are who remember the intimate stroke of the hour that was gain or loss. As August merges into a warm September...

There is no certain line that the season's cross Except for a space in time for the giving over. Like the space in time when the leaves uncover the bough, Thinning, as fond words thin on the lips of a lover. Yet never, never, marked with a startled "now," People change, and the change is a mild wind blowing. Drying the dew and spreading a film of dust. None recall the way of the mild wind's going. Fill the crinkled edge of a leaf that is veined with rust. Signatures the change when the change is made. And undeniable proof has been heaped thereon. People change, and the form of the change is laid. Like grass that bends with the wind, though the wind is gone. —Selected.

Metal Shipments To Germany Halt
 'Dora' Curbs Profiteering Britons Who Sold To Nazis

By MILTON BRONNER
 NEA Service Staff Correspondent
 LONDON — With war between Great Britain and Germany distinctly in the offing, the extraordinary situation has been presented of British metal and rubber dealers selling to the Nazis enormous quantities of material the Reich was anxious to store up for war purposes.

The dealing only stopped when Parliament in its extra session swiftly passed laws destined to give the government full wartime powers. One of these laws is that which in the last war came to be called, partly in derision, partly in earnest, "Dora." It came from "D.O.R.A.," which stood for "Defense of the Realm Act."

Unde "Dora" light and heat and food and many of the amenities of ordinary life were restricted. The restrictions remained in force for a considerable time after the war. Hence the cartoonists depicted "Dora" as an old wench.

Restrictions Badly Needed
 But "Dora" has been badly needed in the past few weeks. In the period just prior to the sudden announcement that Germany and Russia were going to sign a non-aggression pact, Germany bought in London some 9000 tons of copper. The cost of this was nearly two million dollars. The terms were cash. On the other hand, Germany stipulated that the metal must be delivered before September 1.

As a result of this active buying, the price of copper rose more than $4.00 per ton. It was estimated that after this copper was delivered, England would only have about 29,000 tons on hand. Germany's reason for this swift buying is evident. At home it only produces 3.9 per cent of its needs. Next to copper, the most sensational buying is that of new rubber which is capable of being stored for quite a long time. Germany has made great play to the world about its substitute artificial rubber called buna, made from coal and other materials. But its agents, nevertheless wanted all the real thing they could get.

In the last weeks of August, 17,000 tons of rubber were bought at a cost of over $6,500,000. Here again the terms were cash and delivery was asked by September 7. Here again the German demand sent the price of rubber up.

The sinister feature of the sales was this: at the time of the Munich crisis last year there were 100,000 tons of rubber in England. Just recently there were only 50,000 tons and one-third of this has now been sold to Germany.

Supplied Nazis Nickel for Shells
 German agents have also been buying lead and nickel. In fact, they secured about one quarter of the supply of nickel which was on hand in England. Nickel is used in making hard steel for shells, tanks and armor plate. England, through her colonies and the Dominion of Canada, almost has a monopoly. Her merchants obliged the Germans with this metal they so desperately wanted.

As a London paper bitterly said: "Maybe in a few days' time we will get much of this metal back—in the shape of bullets and bombs, killing and wounding our people."

Another highly significant purchase that was recently made by the Germans in the London market was that of 2000 bags of shellac. Here again England has a sort of monopoly. Shel-

WE, THE WOMEN

By RUTH MILLETT

Every wife ought to somehow put over the idea that her marriage is happy and her husband is a pretty swell guy. She owes that much to her husband—and to her self-respect.

There are several ways of getting the idea across—without being a bore, or seeming to protest too much. Of course, the easiest way for her to create the impression is just to lay off panning him to her women friends. Even hie day after a fight, when she is feeling the need of letting down her hair and getting a little sympathetic understanding, she ought to hold off. Next week she will have forgotten that she ever thought such things about her husband—but her friends won't.

A more positive technique is to build up while apparently poking fun. It's easy for a woman to show how well her husband is doing by telling a story that is good for a laugh—but which gets in a bit of the kind of information she would like to have passed around.

A third way—slow but sure—is to treat her husband as courteously as she treats other men. To listen to his favorite story as though it weren't a favorite story. Not to ridicule his ideas when the crowd is having a heated discussion—or get on one side of a question simply because he is on the other.

Should Not Ignore Him
 Of course, another way is not to start ignoring him the minute she gets where there are other men—as though any man is more attractive than the one she married. Putting a good face on her marriage is something any woman with a few brains and control of her tongue can do.

Serial Story

Murder on the Boardwalk

BY ELLINORE COWAN STONE

COPYRIGHT, 1939, NEA SERVICE, INC.

Yesterday, Chandra makes the surprising statement that Mrs. Talbert's nephew, Earl, believed kidnapped 12 years ago, engineered the plot himself, is still alive. Jasper tells of receiving a letter from Mrs. Talbert, Inspector Parsons asks him to identify the one found in the victim's purse.

CHAPTER XVI

"Mrs. Talbert did not write this, sir," Jasper declared as soon as he glanced over the letter for which the inspector had handed him. "Someone forged it, apparently to throw suspicion on Miss Christine."

"But you are sure that Mrs. Talbert did write the note delivered to you the night of her disappearance?"

"Yes, sir. . . I told you that for some time Mrs. Talbert had been anticipating an emergency. If I may say so, sir, she seemed pleasantly excited by the idea. In preparation for it she had worked up a kind of code; and she had rehearsed me in it. It—"

"We'll go into the code later. Tell me what that note said."

"It said—on the face of it of course, sir—'Am called away on sudden business. Close house tonight; send servants on month's vacation; with pay; have all services discontinued; and deliver keys to bank. Wait in Surf City for further instructions.' You see, sir, the trick was in the way she formed her letters. For instance, if she looped her 't's' it meant, 'What I expected has happened'; and if—"

"Let's have the note," the inspector interrupted, "or what you understood from it."

"Well, what she wanted me to understand first, sir, was that that note had been dictated by someone else. I also gathered that she was being detained. But Mrs. Talbert must have been hurried or confused. For aside from that, I could decode only two words. One was 'Boardwalk,' and the other—"

A MOTORCYCLE roared to a stop at the door, and an imperative knock sounded outside. Inspector Parsons said, "I'll attend to this," and went out into the hall.

When he returned he was briskly sorting a sheaf of reports. "Go on," he prompted without looking up.

"It was the second word, sir, that was responsible for my having spent most of the next two days about the waterfront."

"And that word, of course, was 'boat'?" the inspector anticipated.

"But that launch wasn't abandoned as the newspaper story said, Jasper. The owner, Captain Parks, was aboard. He showed us a letter from Mrs. Talbert, engaging his boat for a deepsea fishing trip, enclosing a check, signed by her, in partial payment, and instructing him to call at the Twenty-seventh street dock early this morning. . . But long before that, Mrs. Talbert was dead."

For a moment Jasper seemed too stunned for words.

"But, sir," he faltered at last, "Mrs. Talbert doesn't fish. She never wrote that letter of her own accord."

"I don't think so either. Yet some hours after the murder, Mrs. Talbert's car was located, empty and locked, at the Twenty-seventh Street dock. . . Now, about the time when Mrs. Talbert's dead body was found, you were picked up on the beach with a key-holder in your hand."

"The key-holder turned out to belong to Mr. Yardley, who two hours before, had been seen hiding in a car parked exactly where Mrs. Talbert's was found, waiting—so he said—for Miss Thorenson. Among the keys was the key to Mrs. Talbert's car. . . And early last evening you rowed out to Captain King's launch and spent some time snooping around."

"Yes, sir—because I gathered from Mrs. Talbert's note that she either was detained on a boat off the Boardwalk, or expected to be."

"But Captain King woke up in time," Inspector Parsons said, "to follow you to shore in his dinghy. You are right about one thing, however: Mrs. Talbert never was on that boat."

MR. WILMET spoke for the first time, his round pink face puckered in bewilderment.

"But how can you be sure that Mrs. Talbert wasn't taken to that boat and murdered after this man was there? I understood from the newspaper that one pair of those footprints was hers."

"Miss Thorenson is evidently one woman who doesn't run to gossip. You had dinner with her, didn't you? . . . Those footprints, as I told her, did fit Mrs. Talbert's shoes. Not the ones she was wearing that night, but another pair, identical in measurements except for one slightly damaged heel."

"Did he tell me that because he wanted it repeated?" Christine wondered.

"But the inspector was going on, each word dropping like the tinkle of ice. Mrs. Talbert, it happens, was killed in a wheel chair, her body wheeled to the booth and left there. The Coast Guard found the chair this morning under the edge of the Boardwalk."

After a silence through which his words seemed to echo and re-echo, he went on, "The man who had been pushing that chair has confessed."

"Confessed?"

The voice of Chandra, who unsigned by her, in partial payment, and instructing him to call at the Twenty-seventh street dock early this morning, rang out, sharply incredulous.

"Confessed," the inspector went on smoothly, "that the night before the murder, he had left his chair to join a dice game, and that when he went back to the place where it should have been, it was gone. When we found it, the number-plates of the company had been removed, so that in a crowd, it might have passed for any private chair."

"But I should think," Bill said, "that the next day would have carried the chair from beneath the walk and out to sea."

"That was what the murderer thought when he dumped it over the railing. . . Perhaps he was hurried at the last moment, or—"

The inspector paused as if to inspect an idea—perhaps he didn't know that except for a few times a year, with phenomenally high tides, the water doesn't come up under the walk at that particular point."

CHRISTINE said in a voice she hardly recognized as her own, "I thought the doctor said she must have been killed before 11:30. Up to that time, the Boardwalk was crowded."

"That's just the point, Miss Thorenson—the Boardwalk was crowded. And who, in a crowd like that, ever looks twice at the man pushing a wheel chair—or at the passenger. Besides, this was an enclosed chair with sun-glass windows. The booth into which it was wheeled the body to unload it was unlighted, and the point at which the chair was finally discarded is the darkest part of the promenade, where few people walk."

Jasper asked, his face chalk white, "But how do you know that Mrs. Talbert was murdered in that chair?"

"Because," the inspector said, "in that chair we found fragments of the spectacles she had been wearing, and—various indications of violence. That letter to Captain King and the one to Miss Thorenson we found in Mrs. Talbert's purse—both probably forged as you have not failed to suggest—and those footprints—"

Christine wondered why he glanced toward Bill Yardley—"were deliberate attempts to frustrate justice."

"If I'd been doing it," Bill put in, "I'd have looked to make sure the tide ordinarily came in that far, before I heaved the chair over."

Chandra said very softly, "I find it impossible to believe that he did not at least—try to sea."

But Quinn needs help, so agreed to give the Pacific Coast League club $1000 down and $9000 more if the Bees decided the keep West after May 15 of the following season.

Right now there aren't many outfielders better than West in the National League.

"Please Don't Hurt My Little Girl"

DEAR DRIVER—

Today my daughter who is seven years old, started to school as usual. She wore a dark blue dress with a white collar. She had on black shoes and wore blue gloves. Her cocker-spaniel, whose name is "Scout," sat on the front porch and whined his canine belief in the folly of education as she waved "goodbye" and started off to the halls of learning.

Tonight we talked about school. She told me about the girl who sits in front of her—the girl with yellow curls—and the boy across the aisle who makes funny faces. She told me about her teacher, who has eyes in the back of her head—and about the trees in the school yard—and about the big girl who doesn't believe in Santa Claus. We talked about a lot of things—tremendously vital, unimportant things; then we studied spelling, reading and arithmetic—and then to bed.

She's back here now—back in the nursery—sound asleep, with "Princess Elizabeth" (that's a doll) cuddled in her right arm. You guys wouldn't hurt her, would you? You see, I'm her daddy. When her doll is broken or her finger is cut, or her head gets bumped, I can fix it—but when she starts to school when she walks across the street, then she's in your hands.

She's a nice kid. She can run like a deer and darts about like a chipmunk. She likes to ride horses and swim and hike with me on Sunday afternoons. But I can't be with her all the time—I have to work to pay for her clothes and her education. So please help me look for her. Please drive carefully, please drive slowly past the schools and intersections—and please remember, that children run from behind parked cars.

Please, don't hurt my little girl.

Lightning-Quick War Only Dream

Nazis, Italy Might Strike—But England, France Would Hold On

By ALEXANDER R. GEORGE
Feature Service Writer

WASHINGTON—Nine out of ten military experts believe that if a general war breaks out in Europe, Germany will try to deliver a quick knockout punch to Great Britain. But these same experts strongly believe that "lightning" war by Germany would bring Britain to her knees in a hurry. The lightning game can be played both ways.

Since Munich French and British air forces have been rapidly strengthened, some preceding numerical superiority in the past, bombing planes from the democracies could give important industrial, states of Germany and Italy heavy losses of dynamite.

Blues Sell Strong

Financial experts say it would be impossible for Germany to swiftly move through the powerful Maginot line and the British army of the world. Germany's tremendous force of bombing planes unquestionably could make a dash to London to English shipping and industrial centers. But the British could keep going as long as they remained Europe's premier sea power. And the consensus of the experts is that Nazi bombing planes or submarines could not destroy or cripple British dreadnoughts.

One German naval observer says the only way big British or French battleships could be destroyed from the air would be to "catch" them at sea in place for several days and to lock up their anti-aircraft gunners."

Sail A Theory

Another commentator could do heavy damage also to French industrial centers, transportation centers and armies, but it couldn't knock out enough strategic highways and railroads to render impotent France's steel fortresses and large, well-trained army.

Even with Italy's air force augmenting German squadrons, military men believe the odds still would run heavily against speedy smashing of the British-French combination.

Lightning fast, they say, still is a theory, not a fact.

Most experts will tell you it still takes infantry to seize and hold a position and in the Spanish and Sino-Japanese wars, as well as the World War, 85 per cent of the casualties were inflicted by the artillery. Infantry and artillery don't move like lightning.

Huge squadrons of mechanized formations in that important department.

"Can you imagine," asks Stengel, "how many runs he'd have driven in if he were with the Red Sox, with two or three waiting to be sent home almost every time he came to bat?"

Max West couldn't be purchased now.

the Poles would be desperate. The experts figure that Germany could hold her own strong line lines on the west with a moderate-sized force while striking Poland a series of smashing blows that would leave her almost impotent as a fighting partner.
The Germans have a large lead whelming—14,000 Reich military planes of all kinds to 1,100 Polish.

Poland's store of military supplies, her industrial capacity and the technical skill and organizing ability of her leaders are not rated in the same class with those of Germany.

For six years the Germans have been utilizing their technical talent and traditional Teutonic thoroughness in the mass production of up-to-the-minute machine guns, medium and heavy artillery, tanks, anti-tank guns, anti-aircraft artillery and motor transport.
The Poles have some good modern weapons, small arms and artillery featuring the French 75 of world renown. But generally, her medium and big cannon is not rated as good as the German equipment.

Already mobilized are some 1,750,000 German soldiers to 500,000 Poles. The trained German reserves number 2,500,000; the Polish reserves, 1,000,000. Hitler probably could put into the field in a short time more than 2,500,000 fully-equipped soldiers. Poland, it is believed, has only enough equipment for an army of 1,000,000 at the most.
Unfortified Borders
Germany's 14,000 planes includes from 4,000 to 5,000 line aircraft. The Poles have an estimated 300 to 400 first-liners. The tremendous disparity would virtually assure complete control of the air by the Germans in a short time.

Poland has some fairly strong fortifications along those sections of her border which face old Germany. German domination of Czechoslovakia, however, provides new avenues of advance upon relatively unfortified sections of Poland.

By PRESTON GROVER

WASHINGTON — One of the barriers to agreement in the Mexican oil disputes lies in the hope of some of the operators that next year's elections in Mexico and the U. S. will bring changes of policy.

In Mexico, conservative voices are asserting that socialization of the country under President Cardenas has proceeded too far for the present. Now is time for consolidation of gains. The same thing has been said for several years of the New Deal.

In the United States the suggestion is advanced that a change of administration in 1941 may bring a change in our attitude toward Mexico. Some hardening might be expected. A shift in the U. S. attitude would be equally as important as a change in the Mexican attitude. Long experience demonstrates that an administration in Mexico can survive without U. S. approval. Huerta tried it for a time before the World war, but finally folded.

If the U. S. should withdraw recognition from the present type of administration in Mexico under protest that it is irresponsible, in time that government likely would fall and one would rise with a disposition to be more "friendly" toward American interests.

Mexican Constitution
Already there have been at least two sharp changes in Mexican policy under the new constitution. Shortly after its adoption in 1917 there was a disposition to advance forcefully toward its objectives, to make big estates into little ones for division among the peons, and to take for the government a greater share of the revenue from natural resources. (Mexico's newest and biggest oil field, for instance, had to pay 15 to 35 per cent government royalty.)
But in time the leaders of the Revolutionary party themselves began to acquire property and to turn conservative. There were other reasons for the change as well. Even President Calles in 1929 began to express some doubts of the utility of the agrarian reforms.

Then came Cardenas. He swung the other way. Big estates, owned by Mexicans as well as Americans, were broken up.

The oil trouble has made some headway toward a settlement, but the outlook for a change of policy in the U. S. or Mexico, or both, has encouraged oil men to peek two times at this hole card. Their troubles began several years ago. So another 18 months may not be fatal. They would go a long way to escape the full force of the present Mexican policy. The Mexican constitution and accompanying laws promise the workman an eight-hour day, decreased night work, reduction of child labor, a six-week, minimum wages, a share in profits and double pay for overtime. The employer is required to supply good homes at low rent, schools, hospitals, industrial accident compensation and death indemnity. Employers must pay the strikers during a strike—providing the strike is a lawful one.

That constitution is a peon's jackpot. It is a knock'em-deader.

Company Profits High?
The oil workers consistently received the highest wages in Mexico, but continued asking more—putting on a big load of demands in 1936. In addition to blanket pay increases, they wanted, for instance, double pay for working in the rain or on oily ground.

A Mexican board of experts asserted that the companies could pay more than they admitted. The board accused British companies of siphoning profits into Canadian companies. Company compromise offers failed. Expropriation followed.

There isn't enough free money in Mexico to pay for the oil company investments unless the most extreme of Mexico to pay for the oil company investments unless the most extreme of Mexican views is accepted. That is that the companies already have earned many times what they have invested, so that little or nothing is owed for the costly plans.

Since expropriation in 1938 all sorts of complications have arisen. Mexico isn't having too much success operating the wells. American and British refineries buy little Mexican oil. Many workmen are jobless.
On the other hand, Germany is buying oil and filling Mexico full of German machinery and goods. The whole thing is bad for the good neighbor policy. Moreover, neither American officials or businessmen want the Mexican expropriation idea to set a precedent for the rest of Latin America. Every last one of those countries has a provision in its constitution permitting expropriations. Once out of hand it could go like a bunch of firecrackers.

This move was announced in a statement from the prime minister's residence after a special meeting of the defense ministers and key cabinet members had discussed preparedness steps to meet the European crisis.

It also was announced that an undetermined number of the Royal Air Force volunteer reserves were being called up. It was understood this would bring the air force virtually to war strength.

Earlier, the government ordered the "precautionary" removal of approximately 3 million women, children, invalids and aged persons from London and other danger spots.

The London Stock Exchange announced it would be closed Friday. No date was fixed for re-opening.

POPE PLEADS FOR PEACE

VATICAN CITY, Rome, Italy.—(AP)—A sudden new peace move by Pope Pius appeared to have been launched Thursday with the handing of notes to the representatives of the five principal powers involved in Europe's crisis.

An informed prelate said they contained a peace appeal.

Spar for Time

LONDON, Eng.—(AP)—Europe's great powers brought their armies to a new high pitch Wednesday while Prime Minister Chamberlain and Adolf Hitler continued their exchange of notes which diplomatic quarters said had failed thus far to come anywhere near a solution of the German-

Polish crisis.

Sources close to the British government said the situation was about the same as it was last Saturday when Hitler sent the first of his historic proposals to Britain.

Facts shared the feeling prevalent in London that the critical situation was "no better and no worse."

"There is no war yet and every day of a peace is a gain," appeared, however, to be the consensus of high officials and common men in every land.

Britain's second note reached Berlin Wednesday. It was described authoritatively as designed to bring a further communication from Hitler, prolonging negotiations.

Some quarters gained hope from reports that Hitler had indicated some willingness, in his communication received here last night, to negotiate directly with Poland.

This same note, however, was reported to have said that Germany had not altered her demands for surrender of Danzig and the Polish corridor, which Poland circles in London said nullified any possibilities the offer may have had.

Polish circles also said they could not accept Hitler's reported suggestion that Poland send a plenipotentiary to Berlin for talks.

The British government sent its secret reply to Hitler Wednesday after consultation with the French and Polish governments. Britain's tactics of keeping the exchange continuing as long as possible was intended, one diplomatic informant said, to prolong the so-called "war of nerves" for its possible effect upon Germany.

was due to the "professional touch" with which Gandall was able to infuse it. To watch him giving instructions to a set of picket-squad leaders—the hisp, civilized labor leader Ter and the overvalued, sunburned farmers—was a liberal education.

Labor Passed Hat for Farmers

"The C. I. O. didn't run this strike," Gandall insists. "It was the farmers' own affair. We didn't bring in any outside pickets, as some people charged."

"But we were friendly. We took up collections for them. And we were prepared, if the farmers asked us, to throw mass picket lines around the big milk plants in New York City."

"This is the biggest thing that ever happened to the labor movement. It made labor see where its real interests lie."

Admittedly, taking C. I. O. help was a hard pill for some of the farmers to swallow.

But they did manage to get it down. Sam Schau, dairy farmer who was strike leader for Chenango county estimates that when the strike began all but a handful of the 1100 strikers in his county were very dubious about taking C. I. O. help. Before the strike ended however he says only a few score of them had any remaining doubts.

Efforts to organize anything like a farm-labor party in the east and middle west have failed uniformly so far. Three or four years ago certain labor groups made a determined drive in that direction, but nothing of any consequence was gained.

And while this milk strike situation had no obvious political implications, it nevertheless did bring farmers and urban union men together in intimate co-operation—and, as such, may presage other developments later.

It will be interesting, incidentally to see what the farmer labor picture is like today farthest west, where it has been a definite political factor.

er necessary for defending the Reich in case war should come.

A short time before Great Britain's latest secret crisis note was handed in at the Reich's chancellery, Hitler appointed a ministerial council of six men, headed by Field Marshal Goering, his most trusted adviser. The others:

Minister of the Interior Wilhelm Frick as head of the nation's administrative apparatus.

Col. Gen. Wilhelm Keitel as chief of the high command of the armed forces.

Dr. Walther Funk as president of the Reichsbank and minister of economics.

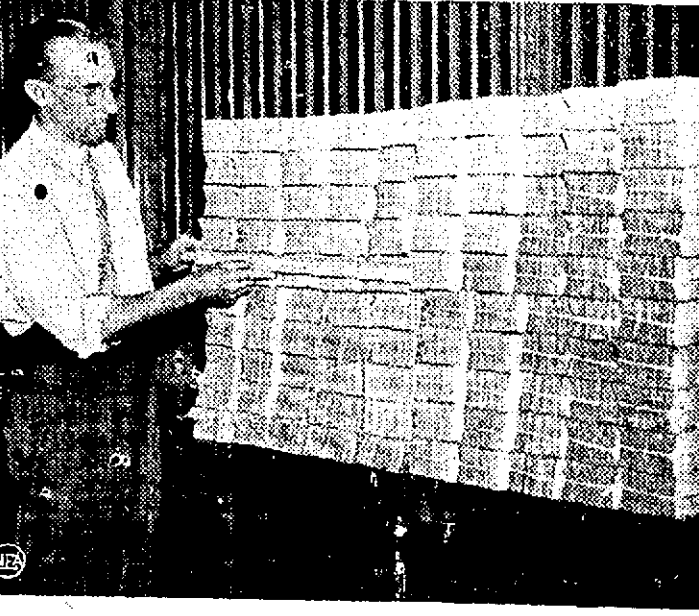

Rudolf Hess as deputy fuhrer of the Nazi party.

Dr. Hans-Heinrich Lammers, as liaison between Hitler and the council.

Albert Froster, Nazi district leader in Danzig and the newly created chief of state there, arrived in Berlin last night for what it was assumed was another important conference with Hitler, and possibly for instructions as to his future course toward Poland.

Froster's unexpected arrival gave rise to reports that Germany proposed to take positive action in respect to the Free City soon.

Here's What Million Looks Like

Hitler Crisis Is

Consider these things and you understand much of Hitler's foreign policy and his internal policy. He is slaking his hatreds. He is getting his revenge. He has revived Germany.

Brands in His Mountain Home

In some respects he resembles the mad King Ludwig II of Bavaria. Ludwig, like Hitler, had his brilliant moments. Ludwig, like Hitler, had his grandiose dreams. Ludwig almost bankrupted his country building castles in the Bavarian Alps. He was one of the first patrons of Richard Wagner.

In one of his castles, the admiring Ludwig had all the walls painted with frescos illustrating scenes in the Wagner operas. In this castle Ludwig liked to shut himself away from people and brood and dream.

Hitler has converted his once simple mountain villa at Berchtesgaden into a palatial place. But that was not enough. Like Ludwig, he craved solitude. So he has built for himself an eyrie right at the top of a mountain. It is inaccessible save by an elevator which goes up a shaft hewn out of the living rock.

Here, like Ludwig, Hitler can look out at the mountains and brood and dream. Like him, he is mad about Wagner. Those operas about the savage and bloody Teutonic legends, the often gloomy Gothic music with its brassy fanfares, soothe Hitler. The suave melodies of Italian music are not for him. He does not eat meat, but he likes his music raw. And when he wants to rest, it is easier to listen to music than to read.

Can Be Kept In Ignorance

Hitler has never been much of a reader. His education is imperfect. A male coterie has it in its hands to keep Hitler in complete ignorance of what the outside world is thinking and saying about him and his policies. The men closest to him every day are Propaganda Minister Goebbels, Foreign Minister von Ribbentrop and the sinister, blinking, smirking Himmler, head of the dreaded secret police. These men are credited with being those who most ardently desire an aggressive policy in European affairs, even at the cost of war.

If they choose, they can give Hitler only played information. They control the press and the radio. Hitler understands only German. So he is intellectually gagged and blindfolded.

PHILADELPHIA — Ball players are sympathizing with Pesches Davis whom the Phils took from the Cincinnati Reds with only six weeks of the season remaining.

They say it would have been better for the pitcher to have gone to the minors Davis would have been listed for at least a half share of a world series cut, should the Reds win.

As a member of another National League club, he is ineligible to draw a cent of whatever series money the Reds get, regardless of where the current leads finish.

NEWPORT NEWS, Va.—(AP)—When Mrs. F. D. Roosevelt "busts the bottle" across the bow of the sleek liner American here and the ship slides down the ways over 45,000 pounds of grease, the United States will have launched the largest liner this nation has ever built.

This is an event worth celebrating—especially for a country that has lagged so in the race for ocean passengers that she had an inferiority complex.

Hamilton Fish's Idea Takes Root

Belgian King's Idea Of Little-Power Appeal Originally Fish's

By PRESTON GROVER

WASHINGTON. At last Representative Hamilton Fish has hit the international jackpot.

He introduced into the Inter-parliamentary union at Oslo a resolution suggesting that a conference of little nations and some big ones form a court of mediation to help keep the big nations out of war. The conference turned the thing inside out and left only a suggestion that Europe seek a peaceful solution of its difficulties.

Yet right on the heels of the New Yorker's resolution came a call from King Leopold of Belgium for just such a conference.

Maybe Ham Fish's resolution wasn't the cause of it all. But why quibble? He recommended the thing and the king did it. Any member of Congress is entitled to make one-two-three.

out of such a perfect sequence.

A whopping success like that might change Fish's whole outlook on life. He is one of Harvard's contributors to government who did NOT come to Washington with eyes a-sparkle to help make the country over before next payday. Ham Fish is an apostle of gloom—a modern Jeremiah.

Sees Power "Reds"

Ever since 1930, when he headed one of the most flowery congressional "Red" hunts, Representative Fish has been a Communist in every pot and two Nazis in every garage. That condition has affected every chairmanship of committees setting out to investigate subversive influences.

Representative Fish, however, has chosen some signs of reduced alarm. In 1936 he deplored "the growing signs of hysteria over communism in America and the unfortunate attempts to link all liberals with communist activities."

"The United States," he added, "is free from communistic appeal among the wage earners than any other nation in the world."

He Guessed Wrong

Rep. Fish had singularly bad luck forecasting war. He made a brief tour of Europe before the Oslo conference, interviewing heads of the various major governments. On Aug. 15 he expressed fear that the nations would be at war by August 20. That surprised Europe no end. It turned out not to be the day Europe had chosen.

He is an outright isolationist, and his isolationism has remained consistent. On a stop in Kansas City one day he was besieged by successive groups of reporters. To each he insisted that the United States should keep its soldiers out of China and out "kick the chestnuts out of the fire for the British Empire."

"Aw, Dad," said his young son, weary of such consistency, "you already told that to three other reporters."

HIGHLIGHTS FROM LATEST BOOKS

Latest of many efforts to explain how Hitler and Germany "got that way" is "Germany Rampant" (Garlick and Sons, $2.50), by Ernst Hanfstaengl. He explains the "The-mine" of the Third Reich in terms of economic militarism that would have been inevitable even if the Kaiser had won in 1918. Here, according to Hanfstaengl, is how Hitler does it:

The secret of Hitler's success is not that he is a good psychologist, but that he is the unconscious expression of the German psychosis. He is elemental, atavistic. His appeal is more than convincing; it is overwhelming. At his side all the vital resources of the old Reich-structure combine to maintain their respective positions and to strengthen them. Their is a difficult role and they walk warily. They must expand and thrive on the shoulders of the people. And the role they have assigned to Hitler is to be their prophet of expansionism.

This mission he interprets mystically as the Germanism (Deutschtum) which all German prophets before him taught, under the disadvantage, however, of not having the "mike" at their disposal. Wireless has been Hitler's most valuable ally since 1933.

Moreover, Hitler has long felt within himself, as he stated in his book, the ability of conveying his German message to the German people, indeed, if ever there was a bad of a state who could talk of "My People," it is the Fuehrer. They are his to mould, not as he probably does not for an instant suspect, to the dictates of the dominant caste in the Reich; the trinity of Junkers, industrial magnates, and war lords.

The Kaiser too was a tool in the hands of the same trinity of in-

RAISING A FAMILY

Don't Let Child's Chum Crowd Out Rest Of World

DEAR MRS. KEEN:

You are more alert than most mothers to the problem of chums. I think you deserve great credit for observing that your little girl has the tendency to have one intimate friend and to hang only in that intimacy.

Up to a certain point, it is an excellent thing for either a boy or a girl to have a pal. In young and story, this theme has come down through the years, so it must be good.

But such a tie-up, if it becomes too fixed and too permanent, is like any other fixation. It can take the place of general experience and the ability to mix. Eventually it robs the child of a chance to round out.

Letty, I shall call her, for I don't know her name, is always tied up with this friend, who is a nice girl, so, in, so good. But you can see that each one of them is completely indifferent and even mean to other children. Not so good.

What each is doing, actually, is repaying to the other from the energetic world around them. They relax in each other's company, and need to make an effort when there.

I am sure that they are alike in type, both emotional introverts, very sensitive and unable to stand the roughness of a crowd, or any give-and-take at all.

Well, you can't change their natures, that's sure. And it is better for them to have each other than to do as many such children do, play alone altogether.

Could you, by any chance, find another child of the same stripe and cleverly bring about a triservate?

Many friends will broaden child. There is a crowd, but often a good crowd. Through this new playmate with just enough difference to arouse them both, they might discover that spreading one's self isn't

Dr. L. M. Lile, Hope's Leading Citizen, Endorses Burns' Film

Dr. L. M. Lile

It was my pleasure to attend the World Premiere of "Our Leading Citizen" at Van Buren on August 7. This is a great picture, and you will enjoy seeing Bob in an entirely different role than heretofore.

—L. M. Lile.

The United States Department of Justice cannot be threatened.—C. John Rogge, Assistant U. S. Attorney General.

"Leading Citizen" Is Colorful Story

New Picture Presents Bob Burns As A Lawyer-Philosopher

"Our Leading Citizen," Paramount's colorful, honest screen treatment of a vital contemporary American problem, will bring Bob Burns back to town in a role which is being hailed as the best of his career. When the picture is presented locally for the first time on Sunday at the Saenger Theatre, Bob will be seen as a man who is a lawyer by profession, a philosopher by instinct, a real dyed-in-the-wool, down-to-earth, 100 per cent American character who believes in the principle of democracy, of square dealing with his fellow men.

As in his other starring success, Bob is once more aided by a grand supporting cast. Numbered among them are Susan Hayward and Joseph Allen, Jr., members of the "Golden Circle," select group of young Paramount players slated for stardom, cast as Bob's daughter and his junior law partner, respectively. The supporting cast also includes Elizabeth Patterson, Gene Lockhart, as an industrialist, and Charles Bickford as the chief of a gang of strike breakers.

The Irvin S. Cobb story is concerned with Bob's efforts to restore law and order in a thriving American city when an industrialist puts through a ten per cent pay cut at one of his mills despite the fact that business is good. Bob and his junior partner have been retained as counsel for Lockhart, an industrialist who refuses to reconsider, Bob resigns as his counsel.

Lockhart's next move is to call in strike breakers. Then agitators arrive in town to urge the workers to meet force with force. To cap all, the mill is bombed, and two of the workers' leaders are killed.

Citizen's Meeting is called by responsible members of the community. Bob speaks in behalf of dispensing with "isms" with all outside influences which are causing more trouble in the dispute. Lockhart turns the meeting into a political rally by revoking the pay cut, and announcing that he will nominate Allen for Junior Senator at the forthcoming State Convention.

It would be giving away too much of the story to tell how Bob goes into action, deals with the leader of the strike breakers, Bickford, in a thrilling fist fight, and finally is nominated to run for the Senate in place of Allen!

Of course, there are grand romantic moments in the picture, involving Miss Hayward and Allen. In the course of the story, Bob has plenty of trouble keeping them together, but he deals with their difficulties in stride. Alfred Santell, who directed Bob in "The Arkansas Traveler," directed the picture. John C. Moffitt wrote the screenplay.

Chiang Propaganda Most Effective

China's Leader Hooks Loud-Speakers on the Few Radio Sets

WASHINGTON — Chiang Kai-shek, Chinese generalissimo, is using a propaganda trick that Washington officials are watching closely and considering for possible use in South America.

Chiang uses loudspeakers to broadcast his propaganda. Reports here say it is tremendously effective. It is hard for the Japanese to stop.

An ordinary radio will do in a pinch. It is tuned in on one of General Chiang broadcasts, with the volume up, it can reach dozens of Chinese who otherwise never would hear a word of what is going on except through the Japanese. Chiang broadcasts in 18 dialects during the day, urging Chinese unity. It is his only way of reaching his people. Probably not one in ten thousand owns a radio.

In Latin America a similar situation exists. It is estimated there are two and three-fourths million receiving sets in Latin America. Only a fraction of those are all-wave sets capable of receiving short-wave broadcasts from the United States, Germany, or Italy.

There is a Catch. Moreover, it is likely that the bulk of those all-wave sets are owned in urban areas. That means that foreign broadcasts likely reach only a restricted list.

But a different situation would develop if a few shops were induced to face their radios out into the street where up-country natives, in for the market, might listen to what is going on in the world as related by foreign broadcasters.

Officials looking into the idea recognize difficulties. It is hard to persuade Brazilians or Bolivians that they will be benefited by having their citizens enlightened by foreign broadcasts. The case in point is, however, that the American broadcasts will be so objective and straightforward in pre-

The Mystery Of The Lost Colony

POT ALBERNI, B. C.—(P)—Scientists hope that prospectors pressing toward the remote Wass lake area on Vancouver island may solve the mystery of a Chinese colony established at Nootka 150 years ago.

Settled by the British, the Chinese were reportedly seized by Spaniards and put to work digging gold. Later they fled, taking some native women with them.

Reports have reached civilization occasionally of a strange tribe in the interior of the island, which may be the mixed race.

sending news and other matter that no real objection can be found.

So far the thing is just an idea. As an idea it has one notable drawback. The same loudspeaker that would broadcast Yankee messages of good will also could be used by Hitler.

That FCC Order

Also you may just as well know that the state department was as much upset as the broadcasting companies over that order of the Federal Communications Commission directing the big radio systems to reflect only true American culture in their foreign programs.

For months the state department has been working quietly with the radio companies to design programs that would reflect American culture and help promote the good neighbor policy in Latin America. There was nothing formal or official about it, but it was operating very well. Being patriotic didn't interfere with the revenue from the foreign broadcasts. Not a handful of revenue comes from these short-wave broadcasts.

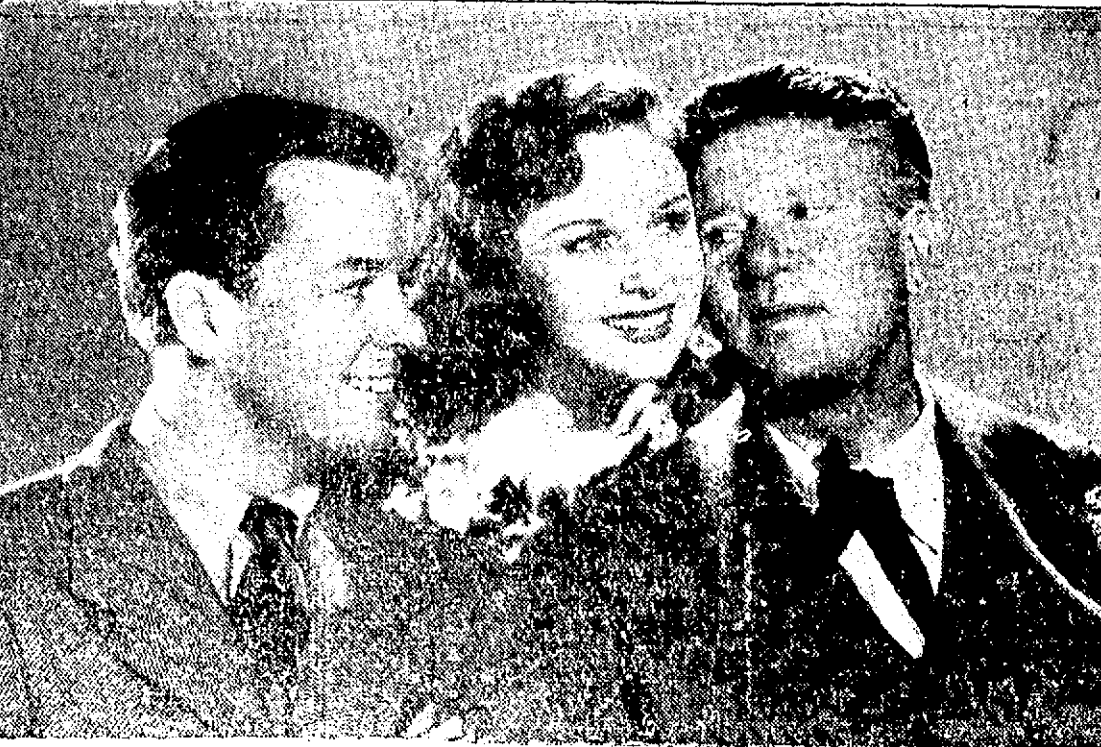

But just as the thing was working along at its smoothest the communications commission, long at odds within itself, tried to make it official by a formal order. The commission was compelled to repeal it later. The state department had to be its very smoothest to restore the old accord with the broadcasting systems.

Two Opinions, One Of Which Counted

BUTTE, Mont.—(P)—A man may have an "inalienable right" to get drunk but a police judge also has an "inalienable right" to fine him for it, says Judge Louis A. Buckley. "Yes, I was drunk—plenty drunk," admitted a defendant before the judge. "And I'll get drunk any time I want to. As long as a man can pay for his beer he has a perfect right to get drunk. You pay the tax when you lay out the dime."

"Ten days," commented the judge.

"Our Leading Citizen," At Saenger Sunday

Bob Burns, in the greatest of all his roles as a lawyer-philosopher, has his hands full fixing the business troubles of his neighbors. Yet some how he manages to find time to solve the romantic problems of his daughter, played by lovely Susan Hayward, in the colorful new Paramount drama, "Our Leading Citizen," which opens Sunday at the Saenger Theatre. Joseph Allen, Jr., Elizabeth Patterson, Gene Lockhart and Charles Bickford are also seen in the supporting cast.

Burns Tackles 'Isms' in Colorful Picture

Bob Burns, that mellow homespun fellow known to millions of Americans as the sage of Van Buren, runs smack into a cover of "isms" in the colorful new Paramount drama, "Our Leading Citizen," which opens Sunday at the Saenger Theatre, and before he gets done with 'em, raises plenty of hob with sundry of 'em!

Bob, who has already established himself as a great portrayer of American characters — remember him as the "traveler" in "The Arkansas Traveler" — and as the shrewd "mule-trader" in a role as grand as the one which he brings to the screen in his new picture — never has been faced with such colorful problems to settle. Cast as a lawyer-philosopher, a dyed-in-the-wool American who has been practicing law in a typical American city for many a year, Bob believes in settling differences in the good old American way. And Bob is faced with plenty of them to settle soon after the start of the story.

Story By Cobb

The story — written especially for Bob by Irvin S. Cobb — finds Bob about to welcome Joseph Allen into his firm as junior partner. The young man's father and grandfather before him have been members of the firm.

Pay of Workers Cut

Immediately after engaging Bob and Allen as counsel, Lockhart cuts the pay of the workers in one of his mills.
